Not sure about your Japanese level? Take our free Japanese level assessment What's your Japanese learning goal and how far away are you from it? If you're unsure where you are, we provide a free Japanese level check. After that, you can book a free consultation with our course coordinator. Get in touch with us and let us know how we can help you achieve your Japanese language target. You will need to know about 100 kanji and about 800 vocabulary words. It should take roughly around 100 - 200 class hours depending on how you study and what resources you use. Both the JLPT N5 and N4 levels have been designed to test classroom Japanese. The best way to prepare is to take an introductory or a beginner course in Japanese. We also recommend you buying N5 textbooks and workbooks and work through them on your own to better prepare yourself. The JLPT is held twice a year, usually in July and December. If you're outside, the test may be held only once a year, in July or December. Registration is usually open until mid-March (for July) and mid-August (for December) It does not help you that much. Passing the different levels of the JLPT can provide you with great opportunities to work in Japan. However, simply passing the N5 is not enough to help you since the N5 is just a test of basic knowledge of Japanese Language. You would require at least a JLPT N3 certificate if you want to work comfortably in Japan. If you are planning to take the JLPT, we would recommend you to go through all 5 levels and until you feel comfortable to have conversations in Japanese fluently.
